

THE UNIVERSITY of EDINBURGH

Death in Service Guidance

1. Purpose

This guidance outlines the actions to be taken when there is a death in service of an employee. It provides information about the support available to managers and employees affected by the death of an employee.

2. Notification

Whoever is first notified of a death in service must:

- obtain the name of the deceased and the School/Department where they worked
- obtain the name and phone number of the notifier and their relationship to the deceased
- let the notifier know that a senior member of staff will call them soon
- immediately inform both:
 - the Head of School/Director of Professional Services Department (or a deputy in their absence) and
 - the HR Partner for the School/Department where the deceased employee worked.

The Head of School/Professional Service Department will decide who is the most appropriate person to inform staff of the death and to liaise with the next of kin. This person (the 'Manager') can be the Head of School/Director of Professional Services Department, the deceased employee's line manager or another nominated senior member of staff in the School/Department.

3. Responsibilities

The responsibilities of the Manager, the HR Partner and key departments when there is a death in service of an employee are as follows:

Manager	Appendix 1 outlines what the Manager is expected to do when there is a death in service.
HR Partner	Appendix 3 outlines what the HR Partner is expected to do when there is a death in service.
The Principal	The Principal sends a letter of condolence to the next of kin, on receipt of the notification email from the HR Partner.

Chaplaincy	The Chaplaincy will contact the School/Department where the deceased employee worked to offer support to colleagues. They will also contact the family or next of kin, unless advised not to.
Events and Protocol	The Events and Protocol team will arrange for the University's flags to be flown at half-mast on the day of the funeral or memorial service.
Payroll	The Payroll team will pay any final salary payment due along with other entitlements (e.g. outstanding annual leave) to the Estate.
Pensions	The Pensions team will check if the deceased was a member of a pension scheme and pay any benefits due. The Payroll and Pensions team will work together to decide who will contact the next of kin to request the required documentation (e.g. original death certificate, next of kin's birth certificate, marriage certificate etc).
Press Office	If there is press interest in a death, the Press Office will work with the manager to agree a strategy for handling the media.

4. Support for Managers and Employees

The death of an employee can have a big impact on individuals and teams. There are a number of places where support can be found at the University, which are listed in Appendix 5.

Appendix 1

Manager Responsibilities

When	Action	Complete
Within 24 hours	Phone the person who notified the University to express your condolences. Use the checklist in Appendix 2 to guide your call.
	Email the HR Partner with details of the deceased: name, job title, department, date of death and the name and address of next of kin (if known). They will then notify the Principal and relevant colleagues (Appendix 3) of the death.
	Email the Payroll Manager and Pensions Manager with the next of kin's: name, address and contact number . The Payroll Manager and Pensions Manager will work together to decide who will contact the next of kin to arrange for payment of final salary and any pensions benefits due.
	Communicate the news to colleagues closest to the deceased (e.g. those in the same department, team or section). This should be done in person, where possible, and in a private area such as a meeting room. Make colleagues aware that they can contact the Chaplaincy, the Staff Counselling Service or their manager for support.
	Contact the Information Services (IS) helpline to redirect emails and phone calls to another member of staff.
Within 2 to 3 days	Email staff and students (if applicable) in the wider School/Department to communicate the news. Provide them with a contact if they require further information.
	Contact any former members of staff and students (if applicable) who may need to be notified.
	Let staff in the immediate work team know about the funeral arrangements. Offer appropriate time off to grieve and to attend the funeral. See Special Leave policy for guidance.
	Circulate a condolence card. Organise for flowers or a wreath to be sent to the family (if appropriate). Where possible, procure from a University supplier. If this is not possible (e.g. online orders, florists that are not in the Edinburgh area) then the cost, up to £50, can be claimed on expenses.
	Amend School/Department records to prevent the family receiving post addressed to the deceased. Ensure the employee file is updated.

	Ensure the employee's annual leave balance is up to date in People and Money. This is important to ensure that all outstanding annual leave entitlement is paid in the final salary payment.
	Contact the IS helpline or your local IS support team to ensure that the deceased is deregistered from local systems and other lists (e.g. University telephone list, staff profile on web pages, Finance systems).
	Take note of any pay or pensions related queries and pass this information to the Payroll or Pensions team. Payroll and Pensions will call the family back with responses to their queries.
	Arrange for the deceased's duties to be covered in the short term and reallocated, and/or arrange recruitment for a replacement in the longer term.
After the funeral/memorial service	Organise for any personal belongings held within the University, and any University property (e.g. laptop, mobile phone, keys) at the deceased's home, to be returned.
	Mark the death, where there is a wish to do so, for example a memorial service. The Chaplaincy can provide support with this. Permission from the family must be obtained before organising and any associated costs must not be passed on to the family.
